Sletto Bros. Secure Big Wheat Yield

Sletto Bros. threshed a half section last week which yielded 45½ bushels to the acre, the wheat grading No. 2. They feel there is no fault to find with the situation as the unexpectedly large yield brought the results from the crop up to their expectations, even with the damage done by the long spell of wet weather.

Re Grain Grading

A farmer living west of town brought two samples of wheat to town recently, one of which was last year's wheat which graded No. 1 on Aug. 30th, the other this year's wheat. Both samples were graded No. 3 or No. 3 tough at all the elevators. The natural conclusion to be drawn from this would be that local buyers knew little about grain or were deliberately grading the grain down.

The buyers contend, however, that no matter when the samples of wheat were grown they were both in poor condition when shown and were not entitled to any better grading than was given.

Enquiry as to prevailing grades at other points would indicate that, Champion farmers are receiving as good grades as are being given elsewhere, a statement that is endorsed by several who have delivered grain at adjacent towns.

The unanimity of the verdict on the samples shown shows a wonderful combination or a certainty that something was radically wrong with the sample of last year's wheat.

Some threshing was done on Tuesday afternoon, although the grain was not in good condition, but a slight fall of snow Tuesday night put an end to further activities until Thursday afternoon, when a large number of outfits started up.

So highly did the public appreciate the bacon sale put on last Saturday by the Champion Meat Market that it is being repeated this week end. Don't miss this real opportunity.

Interesting Address By Mrs. Beaubier

In spite of the dreary day there was a splendid attendance at the W.I. meeting last Tuesday, twenty-four ladies being present. Owing to illness, Mrs. Edwards of Macleod, was not there to address the meeting, but her place was very capably filled by Mrs. Beaubier, who gave a very fine address on "Legislation." Plans were made for the annual W. I. Halloween dance, to be held Friday evening, Oct. 29th. A few minutes during the afternoon were devoted to community singing. Mrs. M. Sisson at the piano. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Nelson's home, Nov. 9th. Mrs. Cain will give a "Canadian Book Review," and all ladies are requested to come dressed to represent some book written by a Canadian author.

R. M. McCracken, barrister, of Boise, Idaho, was in town last week looking after farm interests he has in this vicinity. Mr. McCracken was highly pleased with prospects here, despite the bad weather we have had this fall, and concedes this section has possibilities away above the average for the successful pursuit of agriculture. He is an out and out prohibitionist and claims that in spite of a great deal of bootlegging the situation in the States is more satisfactory than the system we have in Alberta, a conclusion fostered possibly by the time his observations were made.

Geo. Stoddart received word on Monday of the death of his mother at Markdale, Ont., on Wednesday, Oct. 6th. The deceased was 82 years of age and leaves a family of six, three boys and three girls, all married. She resided with her youngest daughter, Mrs. James Goodwill, at Markdale, her husband having predeceased her by thirty-eight years. The funeral took place on Friday, Oct. 8th.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

While it is still some little time until the annual meeting of the village ratepayers, the fact that for the past three years there has not been enough ratepayers at the meeting to nominate the councillors, and in some instances it was necessary to run around town to drum up possible nominees, it might not be amiss to remind the people of Champion that their village has been standing still for a long time if not actually retrogressing year by year. It is not altogether the fault of the councils we have had nor of any one particular council. There are ratepayers who do not hesitate to criticise what is being done in an effort to improve the streets and other village utilities, but when the annual meeting comes round they are conspicuous by their absence. The main street has been fiddled with for years and it has never been fit to travel except for a few weeks at a time, and at present individuals are putting in culverts to permit customers to reach their places of business. Enough money has been spent to have paid for permanent improvements and today the street is nothing short of a disgrace, a statement that would have applied nine tenths of the time during the present year. This sort of thing will continue as long as the business men and ratepayers fail to wake up and take a little interest in what is going on. The permanent improvement of the main street, at least, is a business proposition from every possible angle. It would be a matter of economy, it would improve business, and it would inspire pride rather than disgust in residents, farmers and visitors. So far as civic interest goes in ratepayers the village is dead and might as well be buried if something cannot be done to bring home to every business man and other resident that the community deserves something from them. Concentration on a person's own business is commendable until the community is suffering from dry rot in consequence, then it simply becomes selfishness, pure and unadulterated. We are all partly fossilized in respect to community obligations as it is and it will require but a few years to complete the process unless we wake up. Turning out en masse to the annual village meeting and picking the very best councillors possible and backing them through their term of office, would be the beginning of better things.

If there is any truth in the statement that misery loves company the continued delay we are having here in getting the threshing done and the damage to the grain by sprouting and blanching the situation in the flood swept mid-west states provides the company for our misery on an enlarged scale, not to mention the destruction in Florida and other southern states by violent storms. In the northern part of this province, too, cutting was far from finished when the snow came. British Columbia gardens and fruit also suffered severe damage from the early frosts. The more or less freak season has taken toll almost everywhere.

One thing that may be credited to tourists is the increasing interest in good roads, tourist camps and other items to facilitate pleasant travel by automobile. While we are not located on the main route of tourist travel by any means, during the season a goodly number of foreign cars pass through town. The fact that more of these do not stop here is our own fault. Instead of decent streets we provide something a little worse than can be found almost anywhere else in the country. Any one who passed through town this summer with a car would not come back if they could help it.

Commenting upon the retirement of Mr. Meighen from the leadership of the Conservative party, the Winnipeg Free Press concludes as follows:

"And this, of course, is in the laps the gods. But if Mr. Meighen is now bidding farewell forever to public life he will remain in his retirement a distinguished figure in our national life. There have been several instances in Canada which demonstrate that membership in parliament or government is not essential to the wielding of a potent civic influence. Whatever Mr. Meighen's future may be, he will not be submerged and impotent figure; his qualities forbid such a fate. And his remarkable political career must always make him a shining figure in Canadian political history. To enter parliament at 31, one of a horde of undistinguished raw recruits, and to become almost immediately a parliamentary figure to fight his way to the channel government ranks in six years to win the leadership at 40, to attain and hold against all comers the position of first swordman of Parliament—these are achievements which will survive the disaster of today."

The World Wheat Crop.

(Royal Bank Monthly Letter)

The world over, increased prosperity increases wheat consumption, and wheat production itself is one factor in that prosperity. When Canada produces a large wheat crop selling at a good price, the buying power of the Canadian farmer is increased. The Canadian farmer then purchases more goods from the cities and towns, and the purchasing power of the industrial worker is increased and he, in turn, buys more wheat, with the result that Canadian wheat consumption tends to be higher in years of good crops than in poor years.

Forecasts and estimates for the wheat crops in twenty-seven countries in the Northern Hemisphere, producing about 85 per cent of the world's wheat supply, indicate a total production of 2,801 million bushels for 1925, an increase of 1.2 per cent over the production of these countries in 1924. No record crops and no crop failures have been reported, and a more normal world distribution of the crop is to be anticipated this year than in the past few years. Last year Europe's large crops resulted in unusually small shipments to European ports, while the surplus supply was absorbed by heavy shipments to the Orient.

Since crops of European importing countries promise to be smaller than last year and their carryovers are unduly low, and since larger supplies promise to be available in exporting countries as a whole, international trade in 1925-26 is likely to be somewhat larger than in 1924-25, but smaller than in the two preceding years. Steady improvement in European stability is a further factor which gives promise that Europe will continue to buy wheat in good volume in the face of crop reductions this year. Consider study of the course of probable future demand is just as important a factor in the world wheat situation as are estimates and forecasts concerning supply.

The official estimate of Canada's current wheat crop was revised upward on September 10th to 369,000,000 bushels. Since that date, however, adverse weather conditions have prevailed in the prairie provinces, resulting in a general lowering of grades, not only of wheat but also of coarse grains. Reports indicate, however, that the volume of production will not be seriously affected. A good portion of the wheat has been cut, but very little threshed. This situation is reflected in the current car loadings figures, where the weekly car loadings were smaller than in 1925 for the first time this year. This decrease was almost wholly accounted for by reduced grain shipments from the prairie provinces.

CHAPTER IX.

Joanna's Answer Questions

Brandon watched the girl who sat opposite him, across the little table. The wall-like smile—only the smile—irritated him. It tantalized, hovered about his lips, and in his eyes. The girl watched brotherly, quietly, while she surveyed the bright scene around them. Her eyes kept him for corners of the pink and gold hangings, in answer to the dancer and the other via a few tables like their own. Suddenly her glance met Brandon's. She nodded at him, as if she had surprised his recollection, what ever they were.

"It was good of you to come," Brandon murmured. "Presently it will be such a simple matter to write a tale from you."

"After awhile, I hope, you will tell me what you know and I don't know, of what presently is to be for me," Joanna returned, the serious cloud which was never far absent, showing again in her face.

"We shall have to make a new bargain," he said. "That you will accept from me completely that I am only a spectator to your extraordinary circumstances. I shall be part of them, only you give me favor. What are you?"

"Please," Joanna interrupted; "Not now—not just yet. Of course a man always has a lot of questions to put to an girl he is just trying to get acquainted with, at least that's what I've found, and your tale is longer than most, I suppose. I've since not been able to even—learned them by heart, you know, but they won't fit now. So I shall have to think when you start in. And I don't want to think—just yet. About myself, I mean."

She fell to looking about the room, again, eyes wandering restlessly, but coming with the inner setting of the moment.

Brandon had come to her, as they had agreed, in the wake of the flowers

SICK ABED EIGHT MONTHS

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Could Do All Her Work and Gained in Weight

Malott, Saskatchewan—"When I had inward troubles, headaches and severe pains in my back and sides I was so sick generally that I could not get up and I was in bed most of the time. I was not able to visit and I was unable to help me as I was unable to attend to my baby and could not do any work. She told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles I could get up and drive my own car. I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. When I first took the medicine I only weighed eight pounds. Now I weigh twice as much. If I get out on my feet again, I can't sleep I always take another bottle of the Vegetable Compound. I find it wonderfully good for female troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors. I will be only too glad to answer any letters people asking about it. Write to Mrs. WILLIAM RITCHIE, Box 486, Malott, Saskatchewan."

W. N. U. 1627

she knew, she recognized something operative, as if these women who knew the man whose first carried her and who did not know of Joanna's partner dived, had a common curiosity regard for his unknown character. She concluded, therefore, that women would prefer to not let Brandon, but were secretly fascinated by him. She felt unclean, again, and was glad when the encore finished.

"Now the questions," she challenged him, abruptly, when he had held a light to her finger and then to his own.

"But I haven't made a program of them," he protested, when his wife's voice was the careen. "I promise to combine them all into one, or two, at most; and let content with whatever you continue to tell me. What are you going to do?—that, of course, is the first one."

"And that's longer than any list any ever put into it," she assured him. "Yesterday morning I went to my job at the store wondering if I could get along for two or so—oh, yes, I'm wondering where to begin to spend money. You see one of my plans—the first one I made got me up to someone. I don't know how—but it's gone, anyhow." Brandon probed that. "That was a most interesting thing waited for you last night in the drawing room," he ventured. "I wonder if the snuff you have in mind comes after I left you?"

Joanna looked out into the room, as if, in the brilliance of the scene to soothe her eyes of the light in the drawing room only. Brandon had gone.

"Yes," she admitted, quietly. "After you left, you see John was all that I had, the only one to share with. He dug a hole into me and twisted it around. 'That shouldn't be serious,' Brandon explained. "Wounds of that sort are easily healed. He'll soon be the laughing matter of his tongue and his suspicions."

"I am not so sure of that," she returned, quietly.

"He doesn't understand me—it seems as if nobody does. But he was the only one who hurt. It would be as straight on his mind, of course. But he couldn't speak at me, any more. That makes him uncomfortable."

"Was it then, so serious?" He so very necessary?"

Joanna shot a quick glance at her question. "I declare, I don't know that now. You said there was to be a second question—what is that one?"

"You have answered it," he murmured. "It had to do with—John. I won't ask any more about him. I am to be his rival, you know?"

"I believe you could look into any woman's eyes and say, 'I love you' with a free conscience and without a quiver," she challenged him.

He laughed softly. "You will find few men in your career, who will be able with such a free reply. And, I fancy, you will not be too learning how to meet all such emergencies."

"I don't fear the men," she agreed. "The women. I wonder how I can't be able to measure up. You see, I realize that I shall have to learn a lot of new—well, learn a lot."

"I've got something if you would finish your phrase—a lot of what?" (To be continued)

Turned Tables On Humorist

Steamship Official Had Joke On Irving S. Cobb

The well-known American humorist, Irving S. Cobb, tells this story against himself. Being desirous, towards the close of his last visit to England, of booking his passage back to New York, he was placed at one of the London offices for particulars of sailing, and asked for his inevitable say.

"How," a ship called the North Pole sailing to America?"

"No, sir," came the reply, "we have not."

"Cobb had another go. 'Then perhaps it is the Rheumatism,' came back a message by that?"

"No, sir, I cannot," replied the official, who by this time had decided that he was dealing with a joker. "We have no ship of that name. But I think I can fix you up all right on the Atlantic or the Pacific."

"Your body being lighter than water," he was told, "you cannot possibly sink."

"I know all about that," said the boy. "But I do."

Face Badly Broken Out With Pimples Cuticura Healed

"My face was so badly broken out with pimples that it was actually disfigured. They first started with small black heads on the sides of my face, and feasted. The pimples spread to my forehead, chin and neck. They itched and burned so that I could hardly sleep. They looked so badly that I was ashamed to be seen by any one. The trouble lasted about three years."

I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some. I used about two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and four cakes of Soap and was healed."

Nothing so insures a healthy, clear complexion, soft, smooth hands and glossy, lustrous hair as Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment when necessary.

Antient Inscription On Rock Story of Battle Fought by Norsemen Near Spokane in Year 1010 A.D.

Historical inscriptions, translated by Prof. Olof Opheim as telling of a terrific battle between a band of Norsemen and Indians in the year 1010 A.D., have been found about within the city limits of Spokane.

In announcing the discovery, Prof. Opheim said a great rock, which bears the inscriptions, marks the burial mound of 12 Norsemen who were killed in the battle.

Professor Opheim, widely known as a translator of Runic characters, appearing in several parts of North America, declared the discovery to be the greatest Norse record ever found in the United States. Located beneath high cliffs beside a cold water spring, the inscriptions date back to a great conflict fought more than 1000 years before Columbus discovered America.

A band of Norse Vikings, consisting of 24 men and seven women, was following an old trail while travelling from west to west in 1010, Mr. Opheim explained.

"Exhausted and thirsty, they came to the spring beside the trail and found the spring empty. They immediately attacked the Norse warriors in an effort to drive it away."

Letters To The Editor

Criticism Made By Readers, Usually Taken With Good Grace

For many years, when untoward events disfigured him, the British has caused him by writing to the London Times. He cared not if only the editor read his contribution; it was of his mind and then he went about his accustomed way.

Are letters to the editor read? They are. A controversial storm is often stirred up by one. It may be a simple matter like, "Why read the end of a novel first?" or a world-disturbing debate. One it gets into a hard place to stop in the middle of the story.

"I don't fear the men," she agreed. "The women. I wonder how I can't be able to measure up. You see, I realize that I shall have to learn a lot of new—well, learn a lot."

Sign Posts Of The Sea

Salvagee Data Information From Buoy Which Mark Certain Places

As the traveller by land looks to the fingertips at cross roads and elsewhere for guidance on his journey, so does the sailor gain information from the buoys or signposts of the sea which mark the water at certain spots. Here, unlike the ordinary fingerpost, these sea buoys would convey little or nothing to the landman at first sight, because the meaning of buoys is a subject that must be studied before it can be understood.

For instance, certain buoys of a recognized shape may always be looked for in certain positions when you are making for a harbor or river from seaward. In such cases your course will be marked by "starboard-hand" buoys—on your right—and "port-hand" buoys—on your left.

A starboard-hand buoy must always be painted in only one color. A port-hand buoy may be in single color or, particularly, but its color must differ from that of the starboard-hand buoy. The apical buoys, marking shallow grounds, must be painted with white horizontal stripes. The buoys marking deep grounds must be painted in a single dark color.

People Are Learning Not To Use Harsh Designations

The Salvation Army's discard of the term "Bible school" for the milder and less offensive word "non-Christian," in designating peoples holding other beliefs is in accord with tolerant Christianity. Time was when all who differed in religious belief were dogs of hell or heathens. The Christian nations, based on the teachings of the Bible and the Mohammedan was a dog of the same stripe to the Christian peoples of other religions were heathens to both.

But with the spread of intelligence throughout the world the increase of fellowship among these different races and creed has brought increase of tolerance. In recent years the Christian nations have many times proved friends in need to "heathens" and "heathens" have reciprocated. The time for harsh designations, based on difference of religious belief has passed, and a good riddance to it.—Stanford Beacon-Herald.

Self-Control Aeroplane

World's Largest Passenger Liner

The huge Vickers-Rolls-Royce Vanguard air liner, the largest passenger aeroplane in the world, has been fitted with a new gyroscopic control, which, once in the air can be set to fly the machine on a given course without the pilot again touching the controls, and it is now to undergo a series of day flights.

This air plant with its new control, set on its course it continues to fly level even though the pilot wanders into the clouds. In an actual test flight the pilot left his controls and sat in the cabin reading a newspaper for half an hour before returning to the controls to find that the machine was still flying steadily on its course.—London Observer.

Ships Sail For Arctic

Four ships will sail from Vancouver within the next two weeks for the Western Arctic Ocean, carrying tons of goods and stores, worth an estimated value of $200,000. The Hudson's Bay Company is sending two vessels and a Vancouver trading company the other.

There would be but few mysteries in this world if people looked into everything as closely as a woman looks into a mirror.

All Right In Theory

Things Do Not Always Work Out As They Should

Henry Aldrich, the great English author, confesses that on "first nights" he invariably suffers badly from stage fright.

"A friend in whom he confided this time was skeptical. 'To a man like yourself,' he said, 'who is used to appearing before the footlights continually, such a thing is surely impossible.'"

"'I thought to be,' objected the actor, 'but unfortunately I'm not. I am, in fact, to some extent in the position of the little boy who was being taught to write.'"

"Your body being lighter than water," he was told, "you cannot possibly sink."

Turned Tables On Humorist Steamship Official Had Joke On Irving S. Cobb

The well-known American humorist, Irving S. Cobb, tells this story against himself. Being desirous, towards the close of his last visit to England, of booking his passage back to New York, he was placed at one of the London offices for particulars of sailing, and asked for his inevitable say.

"How," a ship called the North Pole sailing to America?"

"No, sir," came the reply, "we have not."

"Cobb had another go. 'Then perhaps it is the Rheumatism,' came back a message by that?"

"No, sir, I cannot," replied the official, who by this time had decided that he was dealing with a joker. "We have no ship of that name. But I think I can fix you up all right on the Atlantic or the Pacific."

"Your body being lighter than water," he was told, "you cannot possibly sink."

"I know all about that," said the boy. "But I do."

To Our Readers

In making the suggestion that overdue subscriptions should be cleared up this fall, we wish to thank those who have kept their obligations in this line up to date. The very small amount of a year's subscription seems to lead to neglect on the part of many individuals. There is no fortune in operating a paper in a district of this size under the most favorable circumstances, and when unpaid subscriptions mount into hundreds of dollars it decidedly increases the difficulty of the situation. We are aware we do not have to continues publishing The Chronicle and have sometimes considered such a course. The majority of people, we believe, would not like to see this happen on account of the failure of readers to pay promptly so small an amount as $1.50 per year. What is your opinion?

Chandler Organization Strong Financially

Over Thirteen Years Steady Growth Makes Company One of Auto Industries' Consistent Successes

(By Sid Black, Vice Pres. & Gen. Sales Mgr., Chandler-Cleveland Motors Corp.)

The remarkable growth of this motor organization proves the fact that success rarely comes to any commercial enterprise unless its fundamentals are sound.

Formed early in 1912 to build a car of wide public appeal, a car that was sound mechanically, light without sacrifice of strength, powerful without waste, and luxuriously appointed—the company has grown consistently until it is now one of the conspicuous successes in the automotive industry.

In January, 1933, the "plant" of the Chandler organization was a small plant on a side street in Cleveland, Ohio.

On January 1st, 1934, Chandler and Chandler-owned affiliations had an investment of more than ten million dollars in land, buildings and equipment, and a total of 88,704 square feet of floor space on a land area of over 31 acres.

The physical size of the Chandler institution, however, does not even begin to show Chandler's important position in the automotive industry. Statistics make dull reading at times yet they are vitally necessary to show how the Chandler Company has grown, and what its remarkable expansion has meant to the city of Cleveland, home of the Chandler organization.

Sales Total More Than Quarter Billion Since the beginning of business, car sales have yielded the company the vast total of more than $282,000,000.

Export business—the sale of the company's cars in foreign countries—has accounted for over $39,270,000.

Stockholders have prospered as the company prospered, by receiving $15,315,486 in cash dividends—and the Chandler organization is proud of the fact that it has never passed a dividend since the inception of the business.

Today Chandler is in an enviable financial position. Our company not only has no bonded indebtedness, no mortgages, no liens, no bank loans or outstanding notes—but also we have remarkable strength of assets over liabilities.

Future Promises Even Greater Growth

Despite its prosperous past and excellent financial present sales and financial conditions, the future holds even greater promise for the Chandler car.

The announcement of the 1937 Chandler models at the big distributor and dealer convention early in August created a sensation, even among seasoned motor car merchants.

The current sales figures show that the great motor car value, too, is appreciating Chandler value in increasing numbers.

New dealer appointments show a 63 per cent increase in August, 1935, as against August, 1934.

Our manufacturing facilities have been expanded to a point where the 1937 Chandler is built and machined 97 per cent complete in our own factories.

The strong financial of the Chandler organization makes it possible for us to buy materials advantageously, and the strategic location of our factories near the great steel, rubber and raw material centres, insures the minimum freight expense.
